PAYMENT

POSTED ON 04.12.22

Contactless payments have become essential over the past three years with the Covid-19 pandemic a driving factor in its democratization. In fact, the contactless payment limit was raised from 30 to 50 euros in the early days of the pandemic.

During this period, mobile transactions also experienced an unprecedented increase while banks all over the world looked for ways to meet the demand for secure payments in the “new normal”.

manager.one focuses on innovation

Voted by KPMG as the “world’s most innovative card for businesses”, the manager.one payment card continues to win over customers. With contactless payments on the rise, manager.one is looking to increase its use among professionals and offer their customers a smart payment solution secured by biometrics. With innovation in mind, manager.one tapped IDEMIA, a pioneer in the biometric payment card industry, for this offer.

The new manager.one biometric payment card authorizes payments with a fingerprint sensor embedded into the card, allowing its owner to pay in a secure way in a store without entering a four-digit PIN code. With this fully EMV compliant card, transactions are still made by tapping or inserting the card into a merchant POS terminal and the transaction is authenticated when the card is tapped; meaning the contactless payment method can be used no matter the amount of the transaction or the threshold.

Equipped with IDEMIA’s second-generation F.CODE technology, the new manager.one card is designed to ensure privacy—the user’s biometric data is securely stored in the chip and never leaves the card.

The use of biometrics improves the security of our users and offers them a new experience in their purchasing process. Since its foundation, manager.one has been committed to providing its users with a smooth and innovative experience.
